KASPAR HAUSER AND THE REFUGEE DRAMA TODAY

Loss and rebuilding of human identity

Event of the Anthroposophical Society in Switzerland

Saturday, 22nd October 2016

09:00 am - 10:00 pm

The dramatic situation of countless people, who flee from war, terror, poverty and violence has moved Europe for years and with an increasingly shattering effect. Kaspar Hauser's destiny does not at first seem to be obviously connected with this plight but when closely examined a deep inner connection is revealed. The sensitive layer where every human being feels and experiences his identity, was in Hauser's unique, archetypal life severely maltreated. He never got to know his own origin and became a victim of violent assaults. Today we are witnessing incredible misery and isolation of human beings, who leave their own country, language, traditions and beloved friends and family. Even under the ordered regulated conditions of a host country, their continuing path does not necessarily lead to regaining inner security, unless the person experiences help as an act of true humanity.

By spending the day focussed on this current theme, the Anthroposophical Society of Switzerland presents the next in the series of annual events concerning present days needs and anthroposophical initiatives.
